

time, that it might have been inconvenient for her to have it saying, "an under great obligations to you for your kindness. And it is not for you I should not have the laurel—the only wreath of my mother; for it was then impossible for me to raise the sum so generously paid, I shall never forget your kindness."

"Do you wish to take the laurel?" "I have spoken to a captain who will call here in a short time, and have it removed out of the way; for I suppose you will be glad to get rid of it."

"No; at all. I am pleased that I was instrumental of a little service to you, and if ever you need assistance, I shall always be ready to render it."

"Thank you, sir, with all my heart."

At this moment the man came for the laurel, and bidding us good evening, the young lady left the room.

NEWPORT DAILY NEWS.

TUESDAY, May 12, 1868.

FOR PRESIDENT, ULYSSES S. GRANT.

Lord Brougham.

Our readers have been advised, already, of the decease of the distinguished statesman and scholar whose name stands at the head of this article. He has passed away in the ninetieth year of his age, and left a record which will long be remembered by his countrymen and held in honor throughout the civilized world. He had his faults in public as well as in private life, but taken as a whole, was doubtless one of the ablest and purest of British statesmen whose name is likely to be handed down to posterity.

Lord Brougham was a native of Scotland, having been born in Edinburgh where he received his education and where, until 1807, he practised at the bar. He left his native city, and was shortly afterwards called to the bar by the society of Lincoln's Inn, London, soon acquiring a large practice. In 1810 he entered Parliament, and attached himself to the whig opposition, directing his energies chiefly to the slavery question, in conjunction with Wilberforce and other reformers of less note. When Parliament was dissolved in 1812 he contested Liverpool with Mr. Canning, losing the election and remaining in private life until 1816, when he resumed his seat in Parliament, this time for the borough of Winchester. From this time until the reform crisis in 1830, Mr. Brougham labored energetically and fearlessly in the cause of freedom and the rights of conscience, gaining a large influence and a wide reputation by his efforts for the amelioration of the lower classes, and drawing upon himself more public attention than almost any man of his time. In the election which followed the death of George IV, he was returned as a member from the county of York, representing one of the most powerful and aristocratic constituencies in the kingdom. He was immediately acknowledged as the chief of the liberal party, and through his attacks the tory ministry was compelled to resign. When the new cabinet was formed under Earl Spencer, Mr. Brougham became a lord and a chancellor, and during the four years in which he held office under the crown he was the constant champion of the middle classes, working in ardent support of all measures of reform with a zeal that was scarcely short of enthusiasm. Upon the construction of the Melbourne cabinet in 1834, Lord Brougham was not selected in the ministerial combination, and he never afterwards served the crown in the capacity of an adviser.

His literary life was no less remarkable and fruitful than his political life. He was early enrolled among the writers for the Edinburgh Review, and long continued his brilliant contributions to the pages of that magazine. He was one of the principal founders of the Society for the Diffusion of Useful Knowledge, and wrote the "Lives of the Statesmen of the Reign of George III," and also a number of volumes entitled "Political Philosophy." He has besides written many pamphlets on questions relating to science, metaphysics, and politics, and a volume of his "Speeches at the Bar and in the Senate" has been published. He has for many years, except during the sessions of Parliament, resided at Cannes, in the south of France, where he had a chateau, and where he was living at the time of his death.

From the East.

Cleleton, the well known newspaper correspondent is writing letters to the Boston Journal from Jerusalem and the Holy Land. The following sketch of famous places will be interesting to many of our readers:—

THE PLATE OF THE JORDAN.

The plain is dry enough now, though in the time of Ahab and when Jesus was on earth it supported an immense population. There are thickets of tangled thorn, acres of wild sage and low shrubs. Here and there the Arabs have turned the water of the mountain brook from its course and cultivated small patches which produce luxuriantly. Jericho was the city of Palms, but the last tufted palm disappeared long ago, and now the plain is almost a treeless expanse. In summer the sky is rainy, and every green thing, unless its roots reach down to the moisture beneath the surface, is scorched and crisped in the scorching heat. A dam thrown across the Jordan, up stream, and since was carried along its banks, or such a system of irrigation as practised in Egypt, would transform this desert waste to a garden; but nothing flourishes under the Jordan, and there is no hope for this land till the Sultan has taken his departure from Sambul.

THE JORDAN.

But lingering no longer at Gilgal, we pass on, descended to a lower level, ride over yellow sands bare of vegetation, and reach a line of bushes and trees beyond, fringing the banks of the Jordan. The waters sweep angrily past, for the snow lies deep at Hermon, and there have been copious rains. The banks are overflowed, and the current which three months hence will be about 20 feet wide is now 1000 now. The water is thick with mud, like that of the Mississippi in spring. We hear a tumbling and splashing, and looking up stream see a huge slate of the opposite bank crumbling away, undermined by the current. There is nothing beautiful or particularly attractive about the river. The vegetation along the banks is scanty, the trees are small. You may pick out a great many streams in America which, so far as mere beauty is concerned, would be more pleasant than the Jordan. Yet this stream has greater historic interest than any other in the world. It has become a religious and poetic symbol. It waters our poetry. It is filtered through sermons. Shall we say that sometimes the stream is muddy? To think of this river awakens religious and poetic fervor. The ideal Jordan separates us from the Better World, the Land of the Blest.

Good Bishop Stennet imagined that he was standing on the opposite bank when he wrote that sweet hymn:

"There is a land of pure delight,
Sweet fields beyond the swelling flood,
Steady doth in living green;
So to the Jews fair Canaan stood,
While Jordan rolled between."

THE DEAD SEA.

The Newport Bible Society.—The sixth annual meeting of the Newport Bible Society was held last evening in the chapel of the Thirteenth Street Methodist Episcopal Church. In the absence of the President, Mr. J. D. Davis was called to the chair, when after devotional exercises, the minutes of the last meeting was read by the secretary, and approved.

Mr. Gould then presented the secretary's report for the year, which showed that the society had been engaged with considerable success in its appropriate work. The sales at the Depository amounted to $221, 10 and for the last six years to $1267. 77. A Bible reader has been employed one half of each month whose business it is to visit the sick, aged, and blind and read to them the word of life. Fifty-eight families have been thus visited, and the whole number of visits reported is one thousand two hundred and twenty. Of the families thus cared for, thirty-eight were colored, sixteen foreigners, and nine Americans. In some cases there was no person in the family who could read or write so that the labors of the Bible reader seem especially called for.

The Treasurer, S. Engs, presented his report showing the receipts of the Society to have been $880.97 and that there remains a balance to the credit of the society at the Bible House about $266.00. Both reports were ordered printed for circulation among the patrons and friends of the society.

It was voted to hold a public meeting at some future day, and Dr. Gill, A. H. Dred, and J. D. Davis were appointed a committee of arrangements.

The following officers were then chosen for the ensuing year:

President.—W. C. Cozens.
Vice President.—A. D. Bowen.
Secretary.—Wm. Gould.
Treasurer.—S. A. Engs.

Directors.—J. H. Gaze, J. T. B. Smith, John Alton, S. S. Abbot, A. Hildred, Oliver Head, Wm. Sherman, E. S. Hildred, T. W. Wood.

THE JORDAN.—A little girl, daughter of Wm. Mason, about ten years of age, fell off the wharf into the water yesterday while at play, and came very near being drowned. No one was with her except another child, but their screams attracted the attention of a man in a boat who reached the spot in time to save her life. It was a narrow escape and should be a warning to parents not to allow their children to run close proximity to the water.

COSTARS ADVERTISING COLUMN.—Our readers have of course noticed the advertising column devoted to the interest of Henry C. Costar, the proprietor of the exterminators and remedies of various sorts therein named. As Mr. Costar has chosen to leave a portion of his space vacant, some of the subscribers to the "Advertiser" have thought we were without writer sufficient to fill the paper, and several have asked why we left the space blank. We can answer all such very readily. It is simply because the man who contracts for the column and pays for it thinks it best to have it as it has been. He has some excellent articles and has in this way brought them to the attention of the public. The fate of his exterminators has gone all over the land, and it is said that the remedies for other ills, which he offers, have equal merits. As some changes have now been made in the advertisement we advise our friends to read it again.

THE ADVERTISING BUREAU.—This Company held their annual election of officers at their Armory last evening. The following names were elected unanimously to the several offices:

Captain.—Wm. K. Delaney.

1st Lieutenant.—Patrick H. Hogan.

2d Lieutenant.—Wm. A. Hudson.

The Rifles now number ninety men and hold stated drills twice each week.

GREAT CROWD OF BUYERS ATTENDED THE SALE OF HAY.—The sale will be continued to-day at 3 and 7 and the goods will be rushed off regardless of cost. On Friday and Saturday a special sale of Clocks, Fine Goods and Carpets and India Matting, will bring to a conclusion the largest and most successful sale of goods ever conformed to this city. Housekeepers should attend early, for though the hall is large it is likely to be well filled.

PROVIDENCE CITY CONVENTION.

The Republican City Convention yesterday afternoon re-nominated Mayor Doyle and the other incumbents of the general offices. Far City Solicitor, in which office a vacancy exists, Chas. H. Parkhurst, Esq., was nominated. The proceedings were characterized by gratifying unanimity of action, testifying the estimation in which the officials are held, and clearly forecasting the welfare of the people to-morrow.

APPLICATIONS have been made to Providence by the towns of Elmwood and South Providence, for admission annexation. If admitted, the new territory added, will be equal to the present area of the city and will probably form two wards. The proposition meets with a ready response from the city and we hope to see, when the new Government is organized on the first Monday in June, the 9th and 10th wards of Providence, represented by council.

It is rumored that Mr. B. P. Cushingham has the refusal of the City Hotel, and will convert it next fall, at the expiration of the lease, into a house furnishing ware room. Mr. Cunningham is a man of enterprise and industry. His residence, the "Iranistan" of Broadway is a synonym of beauty.

A case now pending in the Supreme Court has exposed the fact, that some of the landlords on Westminster Street receive from their rents of new buildings every two years, enough to more than double the amount for which the buildings are insured. In some cases two or three tenants, pay the entire interest on four and five story buildings. This is a practical illustration of the real cause of high rents. Landlords extort these rents because their tenants have no remedy; they must go out of business, or submit.

"Sweet fields beyond the swelling flood,
Steady doth in living green;
So to the Jews fair Canaan stood,
While Jordan rolled between."
